

Directionalized Tax We'll Never Know

Tick-Tock

Washington AP dispatch on this page yesterday reported that the National Cotton Council has joined retail grocers' associations in urging repeal of federal taxes on margarine.

William R. Blake, vice-president of the cotton council, told the House Agriculture Committee yesterday that cottonseed oil, a component of margarine, is a major factor in the Southern farmer's income.

He could have said—and probably did in testimony too long for full quotation—that the only reason we have a federal tax on margarine is because another group of farmers, in the Northwest, wanted arbitrary help for their own income item, butter.

Our country was founded on the democratic principle that taxation should be limited to the necessary demands of government, and while we followed that course we got along all right. But ever since we began directionalizing taxation—to help one industry or hurt another, to help one class or hurt another, or even to help one class or hurt another class—we haven't been doing so well.

We're going to have to mend our ways, and repeal of the federal tax on margarine is a good place to begin.

Jan Masaryk, foreign minister and son of the founder of the Czechoslovakian government, was killed yesterday in a fall from a government building window in Prague.

He was recently taken over the country by force, said Masaryk committed suicide. But he could have been pushed. And a world that'll never know because Russia slams down the iron curtain wherever she goes can't be blamed for being suspicious.

The grapevine tells me that one Hope merchant has an individual method for beating the two-hour parking regulation in the business district. This person, who has clock to the store, sets it to ring in 1 hour 45 minutes, then moves the car. Clever, but of no use to me. An alarm clock doesn't do me any good even at home.

'Bi-Partisan Policy' Takes Spotlight in Steel Inquiry

With everybody in the act, including the FBI, the big chiefs of Big Steel probably imagine now how nationalized industries are born. All of a sudden "bi-partisan policy" is a reality, as both parties in Congress polish their glasses for a close examination of the concerted rise in steel prices.

The President has been declared interested agencies of the government on the inquiry. Press and public cheer from the sidelines. And there are some who ponder the possibility that, in spite of legal safeguards, monopoly capitalists are now being something more than a stock phrase of the left-wingers.

The big chiefs answer back. They argue that the estimated $68,000,000 that the new price will cost steel users is only 1-10th of one per cent of total steel output. But they don't see the way away from the fact that the new price is also $68,000,000 bucks that somebody's got to pay. And they don't argue away those record after-tax profits for 1947.

So now the hounds of the law are in full cry. The next question is what they will do to Big Steel when they have it treed. For there is a second danger in this price rise. One, obviously, is that it will help cancel out the good done by the drop in food costs. But other, more remote is that it may bring regulations that could get out of hand.

The investigations will give leftists a wonderful chance to point out again that Big Steel's behavior illustrates one of the evils of our capitalist system. They will say that steel is a basic industry that should be taken over by the government, or at least operated as a public utility.

Actually Big Steel's behavior is rather the denial of the capitalist system of free enterprise than an abuse of it. Competition is the life blood of private enterprise. And absence of competition is the principal cause of the steel industry's charges with the drop in food costs.

There will be a temptation, even in a Republican Congress, to throw the book at Big Steel. This isn't a capital labor matter. The price rise in steel has angered other industries, consumers, and a government that is at least talking about ways to bring living costs down.

But corrective measures will have to be chosen carefully. Severe restrictions on steel would tend to restrict its users' activities, just as steel costs affect the cost of a vast number and variety of products.

To substitute government monopoly of decision for private monopoly would not help. If steel's leaders have a restricted sense of public responsibility—and they seem to have—then that sense will have to be legislated into them. But government controls should be designed to promote healthy competition among steel makers. Since steel's influence in all industry works for good as well as bad, the result ought to be a healthier economy.

Easter Sunrise Service Plans Announced

This coming Easter morning, March 28, many churches of the city will cooperate in a sunrise service to celebrate the resurrection of the Lord Jesus. This has come to be an annual worship for the citizens of Hope, and plans are already underway for the service again this year.

The Hope Ministerial Alliance is sponsoring the service. It will be held at the high school athletic stadium at 6:30 a.m. In the event of inclement weather, the service will be held at the high school auditorium.

The high school band, under the direction of Thomas Cannon, and the glee club, under the direction of Mrs. Bill Keltner, will help with the service. An offering will be received to be given to the Alliance for running expenses and as a supplement to the Thanksgiving offering in the relief of needy families. Programs will be invited for everyone's use.

The program will be as follows: Processional, Call to Worship, Invocation, Hymn: "Come Thou Almighty King," Scripture, Prayer, Offertory—"Easterlitan", by the band.

Special Music—"Where You There", by the Glee Club. Message by the Reverend Paul Holdridge, pastor of the Tabernacle church.

Arabs Set Up Martial Law in Palestine

By CARTER L. DAVIDSON
In Northern Palestine, March 11—(AP)—Martial law has been declared in all Northern Palestine, effective at dawn today, by Fawzi Bey al Kaukji, Arab commander.

"Every order from this headquarters will be strictly enforced," he said. "I am now becoming the law of the land in Northern Palestine for civil and military alike," Fawzi Bey declared in his order last night.

His headquarters said prisons now are being established on the mountain top village where Fawzi Bey has set up his command.

Several persons already have been arrested and are awaiting trial before military courts, which officials said will begin sitting soon in all major towns and cities of the northern Holy Land.

The courts are to be operated by Arab lawyers now attached to the Arab Army, which entered the Holy Land last week in a fight partition of the Holy Land, voted by the United Nations last Nov. 29. Fawzi Bey said punishment will be "strict and severe."

Army informants said among those now being held for trial is a Jewish woman "who tried to pose as an English newspaperwoman."

They said the woman, whose identity was not disclosed, was arrested by the Samaritan mountain village Tuesday while trying to arrange an interview with Fawzi Bey.

Feud Spreads Out in U. S. Departments

Washington, March 11—(AP)—The feud over loyalty board records brought a new cross fire of charges today involving Dr. Edward U. Condon.

Meanwhile the battle mounted between the executive and legislative branches of the government. Demands that congressional committees be given access to the loyalty files led to a report that President Truman may issue a counter order to refuse such requests, even when backed with a subpoena.

The House un-American activities subcommittee, which set off the conflict, was itself accused of un-American action by Secretary of Commerce Harrison. The cabinet officer issued a formal statement last night attacking the group's investigation of Condon, director of the Bureau of Sanitary Inspection.

"The subcommittee's action is in my opinion, un-American," Harrison said.

"I summoned members of my staff to secret sessions. It has published its interpretation of their testimony. The press and public were excluded and could not form an independent opinion. From my knowledge of the situation, I can say that the subcommittee's action is misleading."

A few hours earlier Chairman Nixon (R-Calif.) of the subcommittee charged that the Commerce Department was lax in probing Condon's loyalty. Nixon said the Commerce Department's loyalty board started setting out shrubs today to beautify the hall lawn. Milton Sills and Doris Keon in "Burning Daylight" was playing at a local theater.

Nine Women in Mental Hospital Perish in Fire

Asheville, N. C., March 11—(AP)—Nine women patients perished here early today in the blazing inferno of a mental hospital fire.

Seven of the victims were trapped helplessly on upper floors of the four-story central building of the Highland hospital for nervous diseases, Dr. E. T. Bennet, medical director, reported.

The hospital released the following names of the dead: Mrs. A. T. Hipps of Asheville; Mrs. W. B. Kennedy of Kinston, N. C.; Mrs. Ida Engel of Clayton, Mo.; Mrs. Julius Doering of Johnson City, Tenn.; Mrs. J. R. Boroff of Rome, Ga.; Miss M. DeLoe of Bristol, Tenn.; Mrs. E. Scott Fitzgerald of Montgomery, Ala., widow of the author; Mrs. B. W. James of Atlanta; and Mrs. G. C. Womack of Friendsville, Tenn.

The fire, discovered about midnight, started in the kitchen of the hospital's central building, and quickly spread to an elevator shaft and was licking the building's roof when firemen arrived.

Screams of trapped women rang out above the roaring conflagration as doctors, nurses, firemen and police ran through the blazing structure, risking their lives in an effort to save the 20 patients in the building.

They quickly huddled the rescued patients into another building where some sat silently and others yelled hysterically.

The death toll was announced by Dr. Bennett after he and hospital authorities checked the list of patients in the building.

Police captain Harold Enloe was the first man to reach the building. "I could hear screaming on the third floor," he related. "Flames by then were leaping through the roof of the building."

Every available piece of the city's fire fighting equipment was called out and off-duty firemen were rushed to the scene.

The flames, leaping high into the air, lit a large section of this mountain resort city. About 1,000 spectators, many of them dressed in pajamas, milled helplessly around, unable to assist the trapped women.

Two of the victims were identified by hospital authorities as Mrs. Allen T. report city. About 1,000 spectators, many of them dressed in pajamas, milled helplessly around, unable to assist the trapped women.

The hospital, housed in several buildings, about three miles from the heart of Asheville, is a unit of Duke University hospital in Durham.

It was operated for about a quarter of a century by Dr. Robert S. Carroll, a noted mental specialist whose clientele included members of prominent families throughout the South.

Dr. Carroll gave the institution to Duke several years ago.

Predicts Cut in Income Tax Law

Washington, March 11—(AP)—Senator George (D-Iowa) today predicted the Senate Finance Committee will vote for an income tax cut of about $4,750,000,000 with some Democrats voting along.

The Georgia lawmaker, ranking minority member, made this forecast to reporters as the Republican-controlled finance group scheduled a closed meeting 9 a. m., CST, to start writing a tax bill.

Chairman Millikin (R-Colo.) said he believes the job can be finished by tonight.

He and other Republican members are out to whittle the $6,500,000,000 tax cut measure passed by the House to a figure they hope will attract enough Democratic votes to override an expected presidential veto. That would require a two-thirds margin in both House and Senate. Millikin has said he expects the Senate figure to be somewhere between $4,500,000,000 and $5,000,000,000.

George said he believes the amount will be "about half way between" Millikin's low and high figures.

The Georgian commented that he would like to see the cut held at about $4,000,000,000. But he held out little hope the Republicans could be persuaded to go that far.

Airliner Crash Near Chicago Fatal to 12

Chicago, March 11—(AP)—A Delta Airlines DC-4 plane crashed and burned explosively late last night a few seconds after it took off from Chicago's Municipal Airport. Twelve of 13 aboard were killed.

The only survivor was a 33-year-old mother whose seven-year-old son perished in the fiery wreckage. She screamed hysterically for her child as she was pulled from the flames.

The woman, Mrs. Tripolino Mee, of suburban Oak Lawn, Ill., suffered severe burns. Both of her legs and both of her arms were broken.

All four members of the crew were killed. The plane was bound for Miami, Fla. It splashed into an orange-colored flaming mass on a nearby prairie at 10:58 p. m. (CST) from a height of 500 to 1,000 feet, during a snow flurry, witnesses said.

It was Delta's first accident in scheduled operations since 1934. Last year the airlines received a special citation from the National Safety Council.

"Something went wrong" and the huge crash caught fire when only a few feet above the runway, Delta's district traffic manager said. There was no further explanation.

Among the identified dead were two Chicago brothers on their way to Miami Beach, Fla. The death in Miami Beach, Fla. The two were Harold Levy, 47, prominent.

Boyle Says His Home Is a Feed, Repair Station for Bachelors Escaping Matrimony

By HAL BOYLE
New York—(AP)—What is home without a bachelor?

I have no idea. For ten years my household has rung with the patter of little bachelor feet.

About twice a week or so another of these refugees from a wedding ring calls me up at work and says:

"Hey, Boyle—she's puttin' the big pot in the little one. Come home early tonight."

By home they refer to the place where I live. "Putting the big pot in the little one" means Frances is cooking a particularly good dinner. And they want me home only so that they can get at the grub sooner.

It has been that way ever since we were married. Our home always has been a kind of feeding and repair station for unattached males who are desperately anxious either to attain or to escape matrimony. At first they were the pals of my bachelor days. Then the pals of my wife's bachelor days.

I think they came originally because they were lonely and homesick for a home-cooked meal. Frances gave them sympathy, fed them and helped a number of them to find wives. One young writer whose pants she used to patch is now out in Hollywood with a swimming pool all his own and nothing that needs patching except perhaps a stray ulcer here and there.

Through the years Frances has grown pleasantly disillusioned about bachelors. It began when she learned that one of her favorites, who praised her cooking as the best he had ever known, was dishwashing exactly the same line to two other wives.

It increased as she learned how seldom it was she found a bachelor who was of any help around the house. If one did turn up who

U. S. Military Developments Reflect Serious Situation of World Noted by Marshall

By ELTON C. FAY
Washington, March 11—(AP)—Military developments in the United States reflect the "very, very serious" world situation noted by Secretary of State Marshall.

High command conferences new weapons . . . quests for military manpower . . . congressional warnings against cutting defense funds.

All these coincided today with Marshall's grave summation of the trend of global affairs.

But just as the secretary voiced an implied plea to the American people to keep cool, other top officials in both the diplomatic and military branches of the government look pains to stress this:

All efforts to build up the United States' armed might are aimed solely at guarding against aggressive attacks on this country.

These officials shun the idea of a "preventive" war to beat any would-be attacker to the draw. Secretary of Defense Forrestal told a news conference yesterday that it is not the nature of democracies, "particularly this democracy," to plan a war deliberately.

But the United States is determined to put its military house in order.

Here are some of the latest efforts:

High command: Forrestal has ordered the joint chiefs of staff to meet with him and tell him where they disagree about what service should be what a war government.

If these military commanders of the army, navy and air force and the chief of staff to the president still can't agree, Forrestal will make his own decisions.

The chiefs of staff have wrangled for years about such things as the role of the air force and the navy in bombing operations. And they are still arguing, despite last year's service unified command plan.

Weapons: While making ready for further tests of atomic weapons in the Pacific, the military has begun experiments in California with the world's biggest standard explosive bomb—a 21-ton midget.

The first phase of the test was for a B-29 to drop a dud. Later live bombs will be exploded.

The air force plans these test B-29s from its biggest bomber, the B-36. The huge six-engine plane was designed for 10,000-mile flights. However, the range presumably will be less with a load which included the 42,000-pound bomb.

As for China, Marshall said he still believes its government should be broadened to provide greater representation. Asked whether that should include the Communists, he said yes.

Marshall hastened to add a qualification. He said the trouble now is that the Communist party is engaged in open rebellion against the Chinese government. And how that problem is to be handled is for the Chinese government to decide and not for the United States to dictate.

The secretary's assertion suggested that the outcome he hopes for China is this: Eventually the Chinese government will succeed in ending the Communist rebellion, and then will deal with the Communists as a political party.

Nowhere in the European arena of Communist conflict, however, has Marshall said the United States has any official evidence of belief that the Communists work as a native party.

In fact, basic American policy toward Europe openly assumes that in all cases the Communists are an arm of Moscow. That is the situation which State Department officials now believe exists in Czechoslovakia.

It also is at the root of official fear that the Communists may make big inroads into the Italian government in the April 18 elections.

Later they are brought back to a point of land that was given to the Hospital by a Hot Springs man for this purpose. The point is without shade of any sort, so beach umbrellas were bought by the counties, Hempstead buying one, and they group the boys in their wheel chairs around these umbrellas and serve them refreshments, making it nice outing for the boys.

Magazines are taken every month that are not over two months old, also used playing cards and victrola records.

They use lots of magazines and the playing cards get misplaced and lost, so many decks are needed. The victrola records are taken into the wards where the men are bed fast and sometimes if one of the boys who is changing the record is practically helpless except perhaps an arm, he is very likely to drop the record so for one reason they need lots of records.

They have bingo parties for those who can play and various other means of entertainment for the bed patients, so home made cookies are provided by the different counties. Hempstead County has donated its share and many women have donated cookies and home made cakes at different times during the year.

An electric pop corn popper was donated and at Christmas this county donated $75 towards a Christmas gift for every man and nurse who was sick in the hospital.

In November the committee went to Hot Springs and helped to wrap the gifts and the Garland County Red Cross Chapter served a delicious lunch at noon.

34 pounds of home made candy was sent for the Christmas parties.

In January we bought and wrapped 70 gifts for Bingo prizes and have bought and wrapped 70 gifts for this month which will be taken March 10.

As we are so far away, it was decided to send the Bingo prizes and let the counties nearer send the home made cookies.

These boys are very appreciative of all that is done for them and so many are so helpless and the time hangs heavy on their hands so there must be some sort of entertainment for them to pass the time away.

Winter's Worst Cold Wave Hits Most of State

Good weather which this section enjoyed for a couple of days came to an abrupt end yesterday with a mercury drop of 40 degrees within the past 24 hours.

Low temperature recorded at 7 a.m. at the Experiment Station was 22 degrees and high was 61. A reading at 9:45 a.m. Thursday placed the mercury at 21 degrees. Light snow started falling in the early morning hours and continued most of the day.

Little Rock, March 11—(AP)—One of this winter's worst cold waves gripped Arkansas today, and the northwest section of the state was covered with snow measuring up to one foot.

"Much colder" weather was forecast for this afternoon and tonight.

Twelve inches of snow were reported at Rogers and Springdale. Fayetteville had 10.3 inches of snow and a low temperature of three degrees below zero this morning. Snow drifts in these cities were up to three feet. A coating of ice lay under the snow in most places.

Highways in northwest and north central Arkansas were virtually impassable. The heavy snow extended eastward past Harrison to the north central section, which reported seven inches. Sleet and ice were reported at Paragould in east Arkansas.

Batesville and no snow but a quarter of an inch of ice covered streets and highways in that section.

The state highway department urged motorists to stay off north Arkansas roads. Department workers were busy placing sand on hills and curves of the main thoroughfares.

The weather bureau predicted tonight's temperatures would range from zero to five below in north Arkansas and from 10 to 15 in the southeast.

Harrison had a thermometer reading of two above this morning. It was seven above at Fort Smith and 17 at Camden.

Little Rock's 19-degree minimum was its lowest on record for March 11. A 10-degree low was forecast for the capital city tonight.

Sunshine was reported this morning at Little Rock and other parts of north Arkansas, but the temperature remained too low for the snow and ice to melt.

Bus service was available out of Fort Smith to Oklahoma City and Little Rock, but many members of the state highway department were being made north to Fayetteville or due south to Texarkana.

Highway officials at Harrison said roads were nearly impassable in that area. Five miles from Little Rock reached Harrison, most on schedule this morning and went on toward Springfield and Joplin, Mo.

Most schools in the snowbound areas were closed for the remainder of the week.

Red-Inspired Strikes in Austria Coming

Vienna, March 11—(AP)—Informed government sources said today that a wave of Communist inspired strikes is expected throughout Austria next week.

Informants said the Communists are expected to bring about work stoppages through groups similar to the "red" action committees of Czechoslovakia.

In Czechoslovakia action committees were set up before and after the Communists gained control of the government. They are composed of a large number of members. They have been given the job of purging national life of opposition to the Communists.

Minister of Interior Oskar Helmer already has publicly warned the Communists that such groups are illegal and may be punished under Austrian law in certain circumstances.

The executive committee of the Austrian Trade Union Federation has told its members that they are helping to establish such action committees will be expelled from the federation.

In rejecting a Communist demand for a general 25 per cent wage increase, the committee instructed Austrian workers to strike only on orders from the Trade Union Federation.

Renewed Communist activity in Austria appeared to many to be bringing the two major parties, the right wing Peoples Party and the Socialists—closer together.

Little Rock, March 11—(AP)—The scheduled meeting today of the Arkansas Legislative Council has been postponed until March 26, said J. B. Campbell, Hot Springs, council chairman, said the postponement resulted from unfavorable travel conditions in northwest Arkansas.

Little Rock, March 11—(AP)—The Arkansas Crop Reporting Service said today 410,000 chicks were placed last week with northwest Arkansas broiler producers.

Of the total, 262,000 were hatched in the area. The remainder came from other states.

Last week's placements, said the service, were three per cent under those of the preceding week.

Memphis, Tenn., March 9—(AP)—Reiterating his anti-Truman civil rights stand, Political Leader E. H. Crump has announced his candidacy for delegate at large to the Democratic National Convention.

The veteran politician said his platform for the position would be "never to vote for Truman under any circumstances all the way through" the July convention in Philadelphia.

But if Truman is nominated, he said, "I will join other Southerners in advocating a real Southern Democrat for the presidency."

Mrs. Crump's son, John, a delegate should there be a walk-out from the convention, Crump said "just that."

Department prosecutor who presented the case to the grand jury, said the first count of the indictment charges conspiracy and the other two allege filing of false and misleading financial statements.

The combine got about $78,000,000 worth of war contracts.

Patton said the government expects to prove a conspiracy to defraud it of over a million dollars.

The Garssons and former Rep. Andrew J. May (D-Ky.), wartime chairman of the House Military Committee, were convicted in Washington last July on charges of exchanging $53,634 in bribes.

All three have appealed their sentences, which range from eight months to two years.

"I've heard a lot recently about increasing corn yields. I didn't realize that 100 bushels of corn takes as much nitrogen out of the soil as there is in more than 600 pounds of nitrate of soda. I decided to see what would happen if I put back that much soda in side dressings, the last one when the corn was in full silk. I made over 200 bushels on one acre."

Honest, I Didn't Know USED FATS WERE STILL BADLY NEEDED!

Lady, where have you been? Used fats are needed now more than ever, because the shortage of fats and oils today is the greatest in the world's history. Our government warns us that the supply cannot meet today's industrial needs. You can help prevent this supply from getting too low by continuing to turn in used fats.

You say you re-use them for cooking? Fine! But even the drops left after that are worth salvaging. How about melting down fat trimmings, skimming gravies? Those tricks yield plenty!

And come to think of it, what other kitchen waste can you convert into good hard cash? It's a point to remember, these days of high food costs! Butchers pay for used fats. So please... don't throw your fats away. Turn 'em in!

The Doctor Says:

By EDWIN P. JORDAN, M.D.
Written for NEA Service

A blood clot carried to the lungs from somewhere else in the body is called a pulmonary embolism. This is one of the most frightening conditions that can occur in medicine. It usually comes entirely unexpected, suddenly, and several days or even weeks after an operation or illness from which the patient seems to be recovering well.

The clot causing pulmonary embolism is formed most commonly in the legs or lower abdominal region. If it breaks off and is carried by the blood stream through the heart to one of the branch arteries going to the lung, the situation is serious.

If the clot blocks a large branch of the lung artery, death can come with startling suddenness. Generally the victim of a pulmonary embolism has a sudden seizure, shortness of breath combined with pain in some part of the chest. The distress is severe and the skin becomes blue. This is being followed swiftly by unconsciousness from which recovery may or may not take place.

Until recently medicine did not have much to offer in the way either of prevention or treatment. Now some doctors believe that exercise commonly known as early rising after operation, will be helpful in preventing some cases. Also, if a clot which is considered likely to break off is present in the legs the vein above the clot may be tied off to prevent the clot from traveling up the blood vessels.

Preparations Available
There are also two preparations available now which delay the clotting of blood and which can be used in those patients considered likely to develop this complication. These two preparations are heparin and dicumarol. Both have advantages and disadvantages. Experiments with these substances are still going on. Probably both will be used more and more effectively in some of the conditions like pulmonary embolism in which the blood clots too well.

AS LONG AS I LIVE

By Ione Sandberg Shriver DISTRIBUTED BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

THE STORY: Tommy Bishop's death is accepted as an accident. Nevertheless, Sheriff Sam Blanding calls to ask some routine questions. Rush announces that Enos Barton is on his way out. Rush goes to get the girls. Alone with the sheriff, Ann wants to tell him about her suspicions and fear but can't bring herself to talk.

XXIV

Rush came back to the porch with Laurie and Gay but not until a few minutes after Enos Barton's sleek coupe slid to a stop in the driveway.

Ann wondered if Sam Blanding had noted the length of time it had taken Rush to get the girls; she wondered if it had crossed the sheriff's mind that the time had been long and that the questions had been asked the Bancrofts until after Enos Barton was present to warn them if they said the wrong thing.

She was shocked at the numb misery in Laurie's eyes. "Now just any way you folks like," Sam Blanding said. "We can have Stella and the girls here or we can leave them out till we come to the part they saw with their own eyes."

"Susan saw the whole thing," Rush said. "I know." The sheriff's pale eyes flicked to Laurie, took in her silent grief.

But he sent for the maids. They came out to the porch, in their green and white striped uniforms, and sent themselves slightly aside by the door. They looked apprehensive, a little subdued, and at the same time, a little excited.

The facts of the case were dismayingly simple. Laurie and Tommy had taken Rinda to the village, seen her off for Cleveland on the morning train.

"We went to the grocery store," Laurie said and her voice was completely without expression. "and then to the liquor store for some wine. Then I—" her voice faltered but, with an effort, she steadied herself—"I wanted to do some shopping and Tommy offered to take the groceries out to Tophill because Stella had to have the meat before three. I told him I'd telephone when I was ready."

So Tommy returned to Tophill, lunched with Rush and Gay, and when the others went back to their experiment, he went up to the pool for a sunbath and a dip. He came back to the house at twenty.

He came through the kitchen, picked up a sugar cookie, and stood there eating it while he teased Stella about her cooking. Tommy was popular with the maids, they liked his easy-going good nature. And it was typical that when Susan came in from Ann's little flower room, carrying a big vase of cut flowers, he should take it from her and carry it into the front of the house for her.

"What's the idea of bringing in on Mrs. Bancroft?" he asked Susan, who was quick to explain that she'd never do the flowers if Ann was there. That, like the winding of the clock, was one of Ann's personal chores.

"Where'd she go?" Tommy asked, popping the last of the cookie into his mouth. "Don't ask me," Susan said. "But you know what, Mr. Tommy? I'll bet she's forgotten all about the clock. It's the first time since I've worked here I never knew her not to wind it."

And Tommy, naturally for him because he did always try to please, went running up the steps and pulled at the heavy glass door.

Susan said, and her voice shook tremulously and her chin wobbled slightly, that there was something almost majestic in the dreadful way the clock had toppled forward.

"Like it had all the time in the world," she said.

"He tried his best to get out of the way," Tommy had caught Tommy on the steps, thrown him over backwards, striking his head against the banister.

Sam Blanding sent the maids back to their work and for a few minutes everyone sat silent and then the sheriff summed it up. "An accident," he said. "Tragic and regrettable. But still an accident. Ann's head felt as though it were going to burst through her skull."

An accident! Couldn't they see? Were they all blind? Wasn't it as plain as the nose on her face that the clock was supposed to have fallen, not Ann on Tommy, but Ann? Ann who always stood on a little wooden crick in order to reach the top keyhole on the face of the clock? Ann whom they all called fussy for insisting upon winding it herself?

Her mind was tired and confused. There was only one thing she was sure of. Something had been done to that clockcase door to make it stick.

Everyone in the house knew that the clockcase stuck—she'd complained about it often enough. But the thing they didn't know was that it stuck very little! It was ridiculous to think you'd have to pull at it hard enough to send the clock toppling.

"Well, then," Sam Blanding was getting to his feet. "Let's hope accidents don't come in threes. I'd say you folks have about had your share."

"Wait a minute," Ann said and her voice was thin and much too high. "Don't go yet, Sam."

They had all been watching the sheriff get ready to go and now they all turned their heads and looked at her in surprise.

"I have a lot to tell you," she said and she moved herself to the doorway, she tried to sound level and coherent and sane. "I don't believe that Tommy's death was accidental. I think it was—" Her pause took only a fragment of a second—"I think it was murder!"

C. G. Cox, aged 78, died Tuesday in the state hospital at Little Rock. For many years he operated boat landings on Clear and Beard's Lake.

He is survived by his wife and one daughter, Mrs. Thebma Walker. Funeral services were to be held today at 2 p.m. at Evening Shade Community.

History Shows Early Trend to Be Killer

By DAVID C. WHITNEY

New York, March 11—(UP)—When Hugh Coughlin was a little boy he liked to pull little girls' hair and set fire to the tails of dogs. At seven he stabbed a schoolmate with a corkscrew.

Today Coughlin, 22, was held in a hospital prison ward charged with killing one policeman and critically wounding another in a gun battle Tuesday. He was seriously wounded by one of the police.

A police prohibition report detailed the case history of Coughlin from the time he was four years old until he became a cop killer. It went back to 1930 when he was brought to this country from Dublin by his parents.

The report said he was a terror to his teachers. He was in trouble constantly, setting fire to animals' tails, pulling little girls' hair, burning their lunchboxes.

"On one occasion," the report quoted his mother, "he partially severed a dumb waiter rope in an apartment building, causing it to fall and kill a workman in the basement."

"On another occasion he assaulted a crippled man on crutches, hitting the man on the head with a box of eggs. Once he attacked his sister with a long bread knife."

In the dumb waiter incident, authorities found that the rope was badly frayed, and ruled the death an accident.

At 12, Coughlin was arrested as a juvenile delinquent for a mail box theft. He was placed on probation. But his father, who had exercised what little authority there was over him, died that year.

Several months later he was arrested for stealing candy and fruit and was sent to the New York Boys Training School at Warwick, N. Y.

He was released. But at 14 he was arrested for stealing a gun. Coughlin was 16 by the time he made to participate in the district kite flying contest Sunday. Mr. Prichard said.

DOROTHY DIX Married Suitors

The wolves are on the prowl, seeking whom they may devour, and so many unwary Red Riding Hoods are playing along the road that leads to their destruction. Be warned in time, little girls. Never again will you be in such peril. Turn about and run back to your Mamas as fast as you can.

For the married wolf is the most dangerous and cruel of all his bloody tribe and no compassion for you will keep him from casting you aside when he has tired of you and satisfied his lust for youth and freshness and unsophistication, and the beast is always on the scent of new victims.

I am talking now about the married philanderers who prey on girls, without even a single vestige of pity for the lives they are wrecking. There isn't a day that I do not get many letters from guileless young girls, without a single vestige of warning, in love with men who are desperately in love with them, but who cannot marry them because they already have wives and little children.

"I know John loves me because he tells me so, and it simply breaks his heart that we have to keep our love a secret and can't live openly together. But he is so noble that he doesn't feel that he has a right to break up his home and be separated from his kids, who are devoted to him," they write. "And of course, it would be bad for his business, but he tells me to just be patient and he will make everything all right just as soon as he can."

Tabernacle Revival Well Attended

Evangelist Clarence Smith spoke on "Three Signs" at the Wednesday night service of the Revival in progress at the Gospel Tabernacle. He spoke on the signs to the House of David as given in Isaiah the seventh Chapter. "Behold a virgin shall conceive and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel." The second sign was to the unbeliever, given by the Apostle Paul in I Corinthians 14:22. "Wherefore tongues are for a sign, not to them that believe, but to them that believe not." His third sign was to the believer in Matthew 24:2, 3.

Prayer services are conducted each morning at 10 o'clock, and have been well attended. All persons who want to pray are urged to attend these services. The evening services are at 7:30 each evening excepting Saturday. A cordial invitation is extended all, and a hearty welcome awaits you.

Finished his term in the training school. Then he began a series of attempted attacks on women. He was caught, sentenced for first degree rape and sent to reformatory at Elmira, N. Y.

He served five years. Last October he was released. For a few months he stayed away from the police. He worked as a bus boy in a restaurant, but was fired early this year.

Last Tuesday he was planning to rob a delicatessen store when Patrolman Julius Mirell, 27, became suspicious of his actions and tried to arrest him.

The report concluded: "Sadist and masochist—of inferior intelligence and possessed of a psychopathic personality with pathological sexuality."

Victims of Perfidy

And the poor little obsessed victim of man's perfidy believes every word of these black lies and wears her youth out in weary waiting. Or, worse still, throws her cap over the windmill and becomes the temporary inhabitant of a love nest.

It is easy enough to understand why so many girls fall in love with married men. Generally it is their boss who sweeps them off their feet, and that is because he is older, more "worldly" wise, more experienced in handling women and has a "technical" knowledge of love-making at his "fingers' end." No young and inexperienced girl is a match for an old roue, and before she knows it poor little gullible Sally has given him her heart to play with.

There is no tragedy more pitiful than that of the girl in love with a married man. If by any chance the man to whom she has given her very soul returns her affection, yet cannot break the bonds that tie him to another woman, she lives a life of jealousy of the woman who has the place that she feels should be her own, that makes it a hell on earth.

And if she loves a man who

Many Countries of Europe Are Determined to Regain Economy by Any Means

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

Let's continue to bask while we sit in that little burst of sunshine which we conjured up yesterday out of western Europe's efforts at rehabilitation.

Take the Brussels conference among Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg, which already has laid down the political and legal basis of a western European economic and military union. There are of course many implications in this development but to me the most important is the tacit recognition that self-help must be the essential feature of peace and plenty.

This recognition perhaps has been a bit slow in coming to some countries which had been hard hit and hoped that the U. S. A. would not turn on their feet. However, there now seems to be a general understanding that, while America may be expected to play its part in the long run western Europe can survive only through its own efforts. Uncle Sam has no intention of playing Sailer to an economic old-man-of-the-sea.

Several things have helped bring about the realization that self-help is the real answer to the problem. One is the growing fear of the backward advance of communism which can best be combated by economic rehabilitation. Another probably has been the stern scrutiny which the United States Congress has been giving foreign aid proposals. Their recently a fresh element of hope has been injected into the situation by an improvement in crop prospects, after last year's disastrous harvests.

One of the hardest hit of all the countries is England, and she has taken the realistic attitude that while she must have outside help yet recovery must depend mainly upon herself. Sir Stafford Cripps, Chancellor of the Exchequer, has kept hammering at home that the country must pull itself up by its bootstraps, the measure inaugurated by the Socialist government have been truly Spartan.

Yesterday we saw further evidence of this determination. Cripps summed up Britain's outlook for the coming year in a white paper which made it clear that the already hard pinched public would have less to eat and wear. However, while the year is bound to be one of great anxiety, x x x we can help to make it the first year of a great upward turn in the European economic recovery. The chancellor continued:

"This year will beyond doubt be dominated by the decisions of the U. S. Congress on the grant of aid to Europe for reconstruction. With further substantial external aid, we can have no hope of recovering equilibrium at a reasonable standard of life within the next few years."

It's interesting to note that Cripps was speaking of American aid for Europe in general. We are warranted in assuming he had in mind that continental recovery is vital to British rehabilitation for the simple reason that the continent is England's best customer—and she must live by exports.

While the coldly practical Cripps thus was putting on the screws across the channel the French National assembly was struggling with Premier Robert Schuman's anti-inflation program. The latest measure approved by the assembly virtually compels Frenchmen to lend money to the government. The law provides heavy taxes for farmers, businessmen and incomes in the upper brackets, while the forced loan section permits escape from taxes by buying an equal amount of government bonds.

Whether that will help France solve her problem remains to be seen. However, it is an indication of extreme determination to pull the country out of its economic crisis. To get the full significance of the forced loan you have to know that the Frenchman is thrifty, and you will find the farmer hoarding his money in the old fashioned way. So goes a story which would seem to warrant a fair amount of optimism regarding western European rehabilitation, unless there is a further disruption of peace.

Fruit, Chicken and Produce Plentiful

Fresh fruits and vegetables, stewing chickens, fish and oysters, plus varied canned goods, will be in abundance to Arkansas consumers this week.

More than 25 items are on the week's plentiful food list, issued in line with the Cabinet Food Committee's Voluntary Food Conservation Program. Home Demonstration Agent Mary Dixon received the information from the Production and Marketing Administration, USDA.

Valencia oranges, grapefruit, grapes and apples lead the fruit parade. Lettuce, sweet potatoes, cabbage and celery are abundant vegetables.

Stewing chickens will be in plentiful supply, but their popularity will be equalled by the arrival of a bigger and better oyster and fish crop from the Texas gulf coast and Louisiana.

Canned goods include citrus juices, sweet potatoes, grapefruit segments and pumpkin. Other plentiful foods are Irish potatoes, eggs, spinach, tomatoes and greens, including turnips and tops; honey, peanut butter, winter pears, cauliflower, and dried fruits, such as prunes, raisins and peaches.

Laney Still Has Hopes of Agreement

Little Rock, March 10 — (UP) — Arkansas Gov. Ben Laney said today he had not completely lost hope that the Democratic party leadership wouldn't mend its ways over President Truman's proposed civil rights program.

Laney said that for that reason he was not planning to ask other Dixie governors to select an alternative convention site where revolt-minded Southern delegates might stage their own meeting in the event they decided to walk out of the Philadelphia convention this summer.

The Arkansas governor's statement came as he prepared to leave by train for Washington for further parleys with his fellow chief executives from the South. It was a reply to a letter by this state's Democratic national convention site so that we'll have some place to go if we walk out."

"I am going to use all my strength toward rebuilding the party," Laney said today. "If the talks through then I will be ready to consider any other effective measure and a separate convention might be one of them."

He revealed that at present he was concentrating on attempting to have a plank put in the party platform repudiating the president's views and having some candidate other than Mr. Truman nominated.

Laney insisted again that he was "a party man and for the preservation of a great party that can render great service in the future."

He added, however, that "I disagree with the principles being fostered by our party leaders and it doesn't give me any pride to fight for a party operating on those principles."

Laney did not comment directly on another Robins suggestion that the Arkansas chief executive might make a good man on a fourth party ticket but he did say, "I have no personal interest in this matter and am not interested in any other person's ambition."

Simultaneously Attorney General Guy Williams announced he had volunteered to testify before the Senate Rules Committee against the proposed anti-poll tax legislation.

Czech Hero to Be Given State Funeral

By A. I. GOLDBERG

Prague, Czechoslovakia, March 11.—(AP)—Jan Masaryk will be given a state funeral Saturday by Czechoslovakia's Communist-controlled government. He will be laid to rest beside his father, founder and first president of the republic.

The 61-year-old non-party foreign minister was found dead yesterday, two weeks after the new cabinet came to power, in a stone courtyard more than 50 feet below his bathroom window at the foreign office. The government said he jumped.

Funeral services will be held in the Pantheon of the Prague Museum in the capital's central square. Communist Premier Klement Gottwald will speak. Burial will be in the family plot at Lany, beside the grave of Thomas G. Masaryk, who was president from 1912 to 1935 and died in 1937. Vlado Clementis, Communist undersecretary of state for foreign affairs, will speak there.

Czechoslovakia mourned the minister today in shocked melancholy. Halfhearted tributes and black banners did not begin to tell the story of the loss felt by the nation's "little people."

Czechoslovaks are a hard-headed, soft-hearted people, unashamed of sentimentality. The love they lavished on their world-famous son in his lifetime was matched at his death by their sorrowing. The tone of melancholy was set by radio broadcasts, with continuous reference to his death and with the somber melodies of Czech funeral music.

To thousands the loss was personal, because Masaryk numbered his personal friends in the thousands. And to millions the country's loss was real, because they shared with him the tradition of the Masaryk family name and the big part it played in the birth and building of the republic of the Czechs and Slovaks during and after the first world war.

They knew the young Jan, who stood up in the councils of the world and talked with the mighty.

Masaryk's Death Throws a Lot of Light on Question That Proved Puzzling

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

Jan Masaryk's death has thrown much light on a question which has been puzzling a lot of us, namely, just how he appraised the situation growing out of the Communist seizure of power in Czechoslovakia.

Several days after the Red coup he gave a flat endorsement of close cooperation with Russia. However, he coupled this with the dramatic declaration to the army and his Czech and Slovak brothers: "I am with you."

It was an enigmatic statement. Some observers thought it indicated that Masaryk had embarked on a highly dangerous double game. Others felt he was trying to steer a middle course to bring Moscow and the western democracies together in peace.

Well, it now seems probably that in the long and lonely hours of Tuesday night he came to the conclusion that he was playing a futile role—that his usefulness was finished. What tipped the balance may have been his realization that his continued presence in the Communist government as foreign minister was giving the Reds a chance to traffic on the public's worship of his father—founder of the republic.

The magic name of Masaryk was an invaluable asset to the Communist government. It was a source of strength to the totalitarian government. Jan Masaryk may even have felt to use the language of British Prime Minister Attlee, that "he could not endure to live in the suffocating atmosphere of totalitarianism." Indeed, it would be strange if the foreign minister weren't in a state of near despair. Still, I'm inclined to believe that he would have stayed on and fought it out, if he hadn't felt that it was better for his country if he "withdrew."

I'm trying to look at the thing objectively, and perhaps it would be easier if I didn't know Jan Masaryk and his father and other members of the family. I haven't yet met anybody who knew the Masaryk family who didn't have a high regard for it. No braver fighter ever emerged out of central Europe than Thomas Masaryk, the rebel who became father of his country. There is no reason to doubt that Jan was a chip off the old block, so far as bravery is concerned.

So it isn't unreasonable to conclude that Jan Masaryk figured it was for the good of Czechoslovakia if he disappeared. Only a few hours before his death he visited his father's grave. One wonders if the son was seeking inspiration from the wisdom of the father. Perhaps he got that help. Who knows?

The manner in which the end came doesn't in the least alter our hypothesis. The Prague government tells us that he committed suicide by jumping out of a third story window.

In any event, whether Jan Masaryk jumped or whether he met his death in some other mysterious fashion doesn't matter. What does count is that in the darkest hours of Tuesday night he was made a martyr to inspire his people to fight for freedom. If he jumped voluntarily, he was driven to it if he died some other way, the effect remains the same.

Whatever way you figure it, Jan Masaryk has suffered the same fate as his country. But it's my guess that his spirit will continue to march ahead of his people, along side that of his father.

Perhaps even more important is the effect of the Czechoslovak situation on the western democracies. U. S. Secretary of State Marshall yesterday summed up the position in blunt language. He declared that Czechoslovakia is under a "reign of terror," and cited

Masaryk's death as one of the things which indicate very plainly what is going on. He added: "There is also a very strong feeling regarding these developments and a considerable passion of view on the part of a great many in this country. The situation is very, very serious."

Hoover Asked Source of Information

Washington, March 11.—(UP)—The Justice Department is making "friendly" inquiries into former President Herbert Hoover's acquisition of the diaries of Nazi propaganda Chief Joseph Goebbels, it was disclosed today.

Officials of the department's alien property office emphasized they were interested only in determining the legal "chain of title" to the late Nazi official's voluminous journal.

Hoover purchased the diaries, with the army's knowledge, during his 1946 food inspection trip through Europe. They will be published in book form next month.

Government alien property experts said all publishing profits will revert to the government, and that Mr. Hoover has personally assured them the manuscript itself will be held in trust for the United States.

These officials said their only desire was to learn the circumstances under which the army released a document that might have been of interest to the government. The alien property office, it was said, never knew the Goebbels diary was in this country until a New York publishing house announced it would be put into book form.

The 7,000-page, personal day-to-day observations of Hitler's mouthpiece are expected to give students of politics an excellent account of the intrigue and inner workings of the Nazi high command.

According to some reports, the diaries were discovered in the R.R. station zone by a German workman, who had bought them as "waste paper." The German took them into the American zone and sold them to a member of the Hoover party.

Mr. Hoover was understood to have received permission from the army to purchase unwanted documents of possible historical significance for the library of Stanford University in California.

Justice Department sources said Mr. Hoover informed army officials about his purchase. The Hoover party brought the manuscript along when it returned to the United States.

Public Service Group to Hear Phone Proposal

By LEON HATCH

Little Rock, March 11.—(AP)—A question of more than passing interest to thousands of Arkansas residents may be decided within the next several weeks by a three-member tribunal.

The question is whether the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company will be successful in its efforts to increase rates generally throughout Arkansas.

The tribunal is the Arkansas Public Service Commission, which will begin hearings on the company's application next Tuesday.

And the three members, all lawyers by profession, are Charles C. Wine of Texarkana, O. E. Westfall of Camden, and Richard B. McCulloch of Forrest City.

Wine, as commission chairman, will preside. The commission was created Feb. 12, 1945, through a consolidation of the old department of public utilities and the former Arkansas Corporation Commission.

That same day Wine was chosen by Governor Ben Laney to be the new Public Service Commission's first—and so far—only chairman.

This wasn't the initial "first" for Wine in the Laney administration, however. On January 10, 1945, he was named to the department of public utilities as Laney's first official appointment. He served on the old agency for the approximate month before the consolidation.

Before 1945, Wine, now 46, had practiced law for 10 years at Texarkana, where he had moved from Fayetteville. At Fayetteville, he was attorney for the Southwest Arkansas Electric Co-operative Corporation.

Reared in Benton county, Wine served in World War One and later graduated from Columbia University with the degree of bachelor of laws. Mrs. Wine is the former Grace Phillips.

O. E. Westfall—Judge Westfall by virtue of a former municipal judgeship—was the governor's second appointee to the Public Service Commission.

A native of West Virginia, Westfall graduated in law from the University of Valparaiso at Valparaiso, Ind. He had served as Camden municipal judge for four years prior to his appointment to the public service commission. He also was a member of the Camden school board for 17 years and was president of the city's first Methodist church Sunday school for years.

Westfall married Velora Thompson of Ashland, O., in 1920. They have a son and two daughters.

The commission's third member, Richard B. McCulloch, is the son of a jurist famous in Arkansas history. The father was E. A. McCulloch, a justice of the Arkansas supreme court from 1904 to 1927 and chief justice during the latter 10 years of that period. In 1927 he resigned his Arkansas judgeship to accept an appointment as instructor of the Federal Trade Commission, where he remained until his death in 1933.

The son was born March 20, 1900, at Marianna, graduated from the University of Arkansas in 1920 and received his formal legal education at Harvard law school.

After attending an officers' training school in World War One, he was retained at Camp Pike (now Camp Robinson) as an instructor and was discharged as a captain. McCulloch began the practice of law in 1919 with Burke Mann. Two still are partners, having moved the firm in 1938 from Marianna to Forrest City.

After having been employed as special counsel by the old department of public utilities in November, 1943, McCulloch was named to the Public Service Commission July 1, 1945.

He is married and the father of a daughter and a son.

Top Semi-Pro Baseball to Receive Reward

Wichita, Kas., March 11.—(AP)—An all-expense-paid trip to the 1948 World Series will reward the nation's top semi-pro baseball player.

The National Baseball Congress announced today the trip will go to the player designated by its board of major league scouts at the National Tournament here Aug. 13-25.

The board, one scout from each major league club, will pick the winner from some 500 players in the 14th annual national meet—the cream of an estimated 700,000 semi-pro players in the nation.

He'll also get a gold trophy, photographed by the 16 scouts who picked him.

He must be 21, without pro experience, and must also have been named on the official all-state team from the qualifying tournament before coming to the national.

All Hope Given Up for Missing Jockeys

Miami, Fla., March 11.—(UP)—Jockey Porter Roberts, who refused to believe that his missing horse, Jockey Al Snider, couldn't be found, was back riding today after fruitlessly searching the Florida Keys in his own private plane for three days.

Roberts returned to his riding chores at Tropical Park yesterday after failing to find Snider and his two companions, who have been missing since last Friday. Roberts had conducted his own personal search off his coast guard had officially abandoned all hope of finding the three men, lost in a 16-foot fishing boat.

Beloit, San Jose Now Favored

Kansas City, March 11.—(AP)—Ridged Beloit College and the surprising San Jose State Spartans became favorites, by the slightest margins, today as the National Intercollegiate Basketball Tournament moved into the quarterfinal play.

San Jose (Calif.) State, unheralded in pre-tournament publicity, upset the defending champion Marshall College, 74-72, in an overtime period last night that kept the 6,500 fans in an uproar. The Spartans are certain to have trouble tonight in quarterfinal play with Indiana State, The Terre Haute, Ind., team walloped Brigham Young University, 82-68, yesterday.

Beloit, a hard-driving outfit from Wisconsin, bowled over Lawrence Tech of Detroit, 70-52, Beloit meets the University of Louisville to night.

Eight top notch teams, from the starting field of 32, remain in the six-day meet.

San Jose shares the upper bracket with Indiana State, Hamilton College of the Bronx, N.Y., Beloit is bracketed with Louisville, Xavier University of Cincinnati, and Mankato (Minn.) State.

Fair Enough

By King Features Syndicate.

In compliance with the obligation of a free press to inform and warn the public, I continue the presentation of documents, of long notoriety in our national politics but hitherto hidden from the knowledge of the people. There are letters which, if written by him, may bear on the mentality of a politician of national prominence who has become the candidate of the Communist Party for the office of president of the United States. The man is Henry A. Wallace.

The letters were sent to Prof. Nicholas Roerich, whose disciples believed that he was God, and to persons in his official circle. Roerich's admirers included Henry Wallace and official records of the Department of Agriculture prove beyond dispute that Wallace was completely taken in by Roerich and enabled him to carry on political activity in Japan and China under a pretext of collecting certain seed for the Department of Agriculture. Wallace later repudiated Roerich and tried to banish him to India and to prevent his return to this country. Thus, Wallace made it impossible for Roerich to confront him publicly and make revelations which might have stopped his political career in 1940 when he was elected vice president.

The identity of the author of the following letters is not positively known.

This letter is typical:

"Dear M. (the initial of 'Modra' the cult name for Roerich's constant) with me, especially in the morning from 5:45 to 6:45. At that time, I think of the merging of the guru and the likeness of his followers into the likeness of the Blessed One."

"I find the W. one (wondering one, a code name sometimes used by referring to F. D. Roosevelt, W. P. P. and the guru) is more than a ruler, two years hence. These are very busy days and openings do not yet appear. Two stewards have appeared. I do not know which is the black one. Smith is as stated. The thought of the great ones is sweet. Have you heard from the horsecock? His analysis will confirm certain of your ideas."

Guaged with initial "G." for Galahad, the cult name by which Henry Wallace was known to members of the cult regardless of whether he was a member himself.

Another letter:

"Dear M.: Yes the search, whether it be for the holy word of Masonry or the holy word of the potentialities of the age in corn, is the one supremely worthy while life is life. But surely, every one is a potential Galahad, a parsifal incurring the utmost peril insofar as his energy is in this search in terms of the outer world. The seat of the search is in letters of fire—for the one who has won the right to come by using the inner principles to conquer in the outer world. What challenge! What adventure! What patience and grief! He issue conditioned on continuous striving. Yes."

"But do not not and — and M.S. — accept this challenge? Are not a number earnestly in the search and are not quite a few in the same consciousness of striving to the last supper in terms of the modern day? Surely, in this respect, we are members of the same body."

"My heart is strangely moved but my mind is quivering with questions."

"So may we strive for the chalice with the flame above it, encircled and with the banner on either side, the joy of the Lord won by striving and in beauty."

Stimmed with the monogram initials "H.A.W."

Another letter says: "Dear M.: I am worried about the attitude of the people toward the guru. I have heard that the guru is called the 'W. P. P.' and many others are calling the matter worse than a foreboding climax perhaps in connection with the monkeys (Great Britain, W. P. about two years hence."

"So far I have listened quietly. The destination of the guru is not known to W. but may become known at any time. Premature statement here might prejudice the position of the guru and myself. (Roerich was the guru W.P.)"

"It is a question of when and how to make influence felt so as to prevent disaster two years hence. So far I have listened quietly. The destination of the guru is not known to W. but may become known at any time. Premature statement here might prejudice the position of the guru and myself. (Roerich was the guru W.P.)"

"It is a question of when and how to make influence felt so as to prevent disaster two years hence. So far I have listened quietly. The destination of the guru is not known to W. but may become known at any time. Premature statement here might prejudice the position of the guru and myself. (Roerich was the guru W.P.)"

"May we, hold ourselves open to the shining glory of the Great Ones. Signed with a crude 'G' which might signify Galahad, the name by which Wallace was known to members of this cult."

Another letter: "Dear —: This morning at 6:40 E.S.T. the July moon was in the constellation of the ancient Eastern custom there was held in the astral world at that time the gathering of the Adek festival at which the Lord Maitreya

Oaklawn Has Second Big Double Payoff

Hot Springs, March 11.—(AP)—A six furlong allowance race for three-year-olds held the spotlight at Oaklawn Park today.

The Hotel DeSoto allowances, the sixth race on the card, was the scheduled feature. But the fifth race which drew only six starters attracted the interest because three of the six were outstanding Arkansas Derby candidates.

They were Torensee Melrose's Molash, Mrs. Emil Denemark's Enforcer and Henry Forrest's Cotton Joe. The latter two shared the limelight — 117 pounds. Melash was to carry 114 pounds. Fancy Flyer, Lady Lucren and Vanna were the others entered.
